PEGASUS CLASS NEWS

This term, Pegasus Class have been busy developing their independence skills, learning about expectations and behaviours within the community, and exploring a variety of work-related tasks. We have been learning about clothing – including different sizes and how to choose items that fit us correctly. Our regular visits to Tesco, particularly the clothing department, have helped us learn how to read clothing labels and find information about sizes.

We also practised asking for help in the community, using total communication to interact with different people – especially those we may not know. Before going out, we rehearsed these skills through role play at school, helping us build confidence and prepare for real-life situations.

In our topic lessons, we have been exploring the past and discovering how life has changed over time. Our current focus is the Victorian period, where we are learning about the first trains and other powerful forms of transport. We even created our own multisensory train! Now, we are designing Victorian houses using shoeboxes, and once completed, our miniature village will capture the spirit of the era – especially when our Christmas tree, lit with electric lights, shines inside!
